Dietary Requirements & Weight Loss

October is Vegetarian Awareness Month, established by the North American Vegetarian Society to promote and raise awareness of the vegetarian lifestyle. Many people who have unique dietary restrictions such as vegetarianism, religious observances of Kashrut or Halal food laws, or intolerances to gluten or lactose often experience difficulty finding a weight loss program compatible with their restrictions or laws.

The Bernstein Diet is suitable for people with these dietary restrictions*. The diet consists of regular grocery store-bought foods, which allows patients to prepare their meals according to their own laws or restrictions. There is a wide variety of food to choose from in all four groups: vegetables, fruits, protein, and bread substitutes.

The Bernstein Diet caters to people with various dietary needs. There are a variety of proteins to choose from, such as lentils and beans, tofu, and also processed protein brands like M&M, Yves, Zoglo's, etc.

Holiday Hints

When holiday times are approaching, thoughts of delaying your best dieting efforts may be entering your mind, and you may feel your motivation weakening.

A little planning and foresight will allow you to enjoy the holidays while keeping your diet and weight under control. You will be much happier after the holiday if you maintain your weight instead of gaining several pounds. The tips listed here have been helpful to our dieters exposed to holiday temptations.

- Perrier or soda water with lime or lemon in a wine glass will look appropriate and no one will push alcohol at you.

- If dining out to a prepared menu, eat some protein just before leaving home. A can of tuna or a protein pack will allow you to eat a salad and steamed vegetables at dinner and feel comfortable, not hungry.

- If dining at a friend's home, ask to have the salad and vegetables for you to be set aside before dressings and sauces are added.

- If dining at a restaurant, choose restaurants that feature seafood and fresh vegetables instead of exotic sauces and desserts.

- Safe choices are steamed or poached fish (with fresh lemon), lobster or shrimp (no sauces), grilled fish (without butter or oils).

- If you choose a steak and salad menu, a small filet is usually 3-½ oz. Order it grilled. Rare or medium-rare is juicy enough to need no sauces. Try a squeeze of lemon on steak or grilled fish.

- Do not announce "I'm dieting" to others. Some people will feel this as a personal challenge to tempt you to break the rules.

- Fresh fruit as dessert is usually readily available.

- Choose chicken or turkey breast instead of dark meat.

- Drink lots of water with your meal – it will curb your appetite. ♦

Obesity and Cancer

October is Breast Cancer Awareness Month. 1 in 8 women are expected to develop breast cancer within their lifetime. While the vast majority of breast cancer patients are women, about 200 men per year in Canada are also diagnosed.

We know that obesity increases the risk of breast, colon and prostate cancers. The sooner you lose ALL the excess weight, the less probability you have of developing these deadly tumours.

Speak to your physician to discuss how your diet plan can reduce your risk of cancers.

Managing Depression

October 10 is World Mental Health Day. Depression is a mental illness that affects a person's mood, which can last for a long period of time.

Anyone can be affected by depression. 10% of Canadians will suffer a depressive disorder in their lifetime.

Symptoms of depression include:

- Feeling sad, hopeless, guilty, or anxious
- Feeling irritable or angry
- Losing interest in things you used to enjoy
- Withdrawing from others
- Difficulty focusing and recalling information

If you are showing signs of depression and suspect you may be suffering, it is probably NOT "all in your head." Speak to your doctor, early diagnosis and treatment can help slow its progression.

Proper dieting and proper blood sugar management helps control mood changes and depression associated with hormone imbalances. You should be able to reduce any anti-depressant medications and you will feel normal again. Our patients marvel at the improvements they experience. Speak to your physician to discuss how your diet plan can help reduce your symptoms of depression.
